Once there was a little witch who always got everything wrong. No matter how hard she tried, she always got it wrong. There was, for example, the time when she was trying to make a new spell but the more she tried, the worse it got. She was starting to get very cross with herself. Only that morning...

Tom liked collecting things, especially spiders. He would pick them up very carefully and put them in his pocket. Usually this caused him no problems at all - unless his mum found them, but one day something very strange happened to Tom and it was all because of a spider he found crawling up a spiky tree.

Merlin was a wizard. He was getting old and he thought it was about time that he retired and had a holiday. There was only one problem. Who could he find to take his place? He thought that perhaps he ought to try to find someone who was young and could learn all his spells. He began to wonder if he ought to try the school down the road so off he went.
